My two friends came to see me last night. It was so nice to see them again after two months! They had gone sailing in the South Pacific and had just come back. They were very tan and a little thinner. They also had a wonderful look in their eyes. John was always interested in sailing when we were in high school. Nobody was surprised when he married Susan, a famous Olympic sailing champion. Now they usually spend half their time sailing and half their time running a store selling sailing materials. I don't often go sailing with them because I get seasick easily, but I do enjoy hearing of their travels and looking at their photographs when they return home.
